VOWELS.

A has but one sound in Italian, that of the English a in far; as, fâto, fate, câro, dear.

E as two sounds, the open and the close; the open is that of the English e in met; as, fèbbre, fever, and the close that of the English a in fame; as, séno, womb.

I is always pronounced like e in be; as, víno, wine.

O like e has two sounds, one open, the other close. The first is that heard in the English word, not, nor; as, nôte, night, fôrte, strong; and the second is that of English o in the words, note, pore; as, amóre, love, pómo, apple. — E and O, in these volumes, with the circumflex accent, are to be pronounced open; unaccented or with the acute accent, they are pronounced close; as, etêrno, eternal, môrte, death, péna, pain, sóno, am.

U has invariably the sound of oo in the English word coo; as, cúbo, a cube.

J is considered as a vowel in Italian. At the end of a word it sounds like ee in the English word, bee, each vowel pronounced separately be-e; as, têmpj, temples, spázj, spaces. In the beginning or middle of a word it is pronounced like y in the words yield, year, young; as jêna, hyena, nôja, annoyance.

CONSONANTS. — The Italian consonants are pronounced like the English, except c, g, h, s, z.

C before e or i is pronounced like ch in the words chess, chief; as, céna (pronounced chay'-na) supper, cíbo (cheé-bo) food. — In Italian as in English c followed by a, o, u is pronounced like k; as, cârtà, paper, côno, cone, cúpo, sombre.

CC preceding e or i, sounds like ch in the word achieve, that is, the former c pronounced like t, and the latter retains its ordinary sound; as, accênto (pronounce atchèn-to) accent, fáccia (fât-che-a), face.

CH before e or i is pronounced like k, or like ch in the English words “ chemist, chyle „; as, chêto, chíno, pronounce kay'-to, kée-no.

G before e or i has the sound of j in jest or g in gin; as, gélo (pron. jay-lo) frost; giro, (jee'-ro) turn; giórno, (jee-or'-no) day; gêmma, gem.

G followed by a, o, u, is pronounced as in English; thus, gátto, cat, gólfo, gulf, gústto, taste. — If gg comes before the vowel e, or i, the former g sounds like d and the latter like j in jest; as, ôggi, to-day.

GH is pronounced like g in give or gh in ghost; as, ghétto, Jewry, ghirlánda, garland.

GL before a, e, o, u, is pronounced hard as in English; as, gládio, sword, glêba, glebe, glôbo, globe, glútine, glue.

GL has a liquid sound like that of l in pavilion or ll in brilliant, whenever it is followed by the vowel i; as, égli, gli, (pronounce ay-l'-yee, l'eyee') he, to him. It has always the same sound when gli precedes another vowel; as, bigliárdo, billiard, vôglia, will, wish, móglie, wife, cíglío, eye-brow, cigliúto, heavy browed.

GL is pronounced hard as in English when it precedes the vowel i followed by a consonant; as, negligênte, Anglicáno, negligent, Anglican.

GN in the syllables gna, gne, gni, gno, gnu has a liquid sound similar to that of ni in the words companion, pinion, onion; as, compágno, companion, bágno, bath, sógno, dream, agnêllo, lamb, ignúdo, naked, incôgnito, incognito.

GUA, GUE, GUI, are pronounced like gwa, gway, gwee in English; as guância, cheek, guêrra, war, guída, guide

H in Italian is never sounded.

S in Italian as in English has two sounds, the hard and the soft, or the sharp and the flat. Between two vowels it has generally the flat or soft sound as heard in the English word ease; thus, víso, visage, rôsa, rose, arnése, harness. Accompanied by a consonant or at the beginning of a word, it is always pronounced sharp as in pulse, search, class; examples, sárto, tailor, frésco, fresh, ásse, plank.

SC before e or i sounds like sh in the English words, shake, shell, sheer; as, scélta, choice, scêna, scene, scirro, scirrhous.

SC followed by a, o, u is pronounced sk, as in English; thus scândalo, scandal.

SCH is always pronounced like sk, or like sch in the English words school, scholar; as, schêletro, skeleton, schërma, fencing, schiávo, slave, schifo, skiff, schiêna, back, schiôppo, gun.

Z in the beginning or body of a word, has generally its soft sound, that of ds; as, Lázaro, Lazarus, Zodiáco, the Zodiac. — Exception; Z is pronounced sharp like z in the English word chintz or like ts in benefits, when it precedes i followed by another vowel; as, zío, uncle, grázia, grace, spêzie, species.

ZZ is generally pronounced hard like ts; as, fazzolétto, handkerchief, bellézza, beauty.

OBSERVATIONS. — In orthography and pronunciation, as in many other respects, the Italian language approaches nearer to perfection than any other idiom in Europe. In it there are no silent letters and no diphthongs; every letter is pronounced, and each letter, however it may be combined with others, is always articulated distinctly with the sound that is peculiarly its own. Thus the two letters that form a double consonant are each pronounced separately, and two or more vowels coming in succession are articulated one after the other as they come under the eye. Examples: Bôrea (pronounce bô-ray-ah) Boreas, fióre (fee-óray) flower, vói (vó-ee) you, tuôi (too-ô-ee) thy, ter róre (terró-ray) terror, immênso (im-mên-so) immense.

ACCENTS.

There are two accents in Italian, the grave ( ` ) and the acute ( ´ ). The GRAVE ACCENT is placed:

1. On nouns ending in tà and tù which have the singular and plural alike; as, libertà, virtù (contracted from libertàde, virtùde), liberty, virtue.

2. On the first and third person singular of the future of all verbs; as, amerò, I will love, amerà, he will love.

3. On the third person singular of the perfect-definite of all those verbs in which the first person of the same tense ends with two vowels; as, cantái, I sang; cantò, he sang; credéi, I believed; credè, he believed; finii, I finished; finì, he finished.

4. To distinguish between words alike in orthography, but different in signification; as, dì, day, dì, of; sì, yes, so, sì, one's self; è, is, e, and; là, there, la, her, the; lì, there, li, the, them; dà, gives, da, from; però, therefore, péro, a pear-tree; piè, foot, pie, pious; nè, nè, neither nor, ne, of it, of them; têste, heads, testè, just now; Côla, abbrev. of Nicôla, Nicholas, colà, there; côsta, coast, costà, there.

5. To signify that the vowels thus marked are shortened and pronounced in one syllable with the preceding vowel; as, ciò, this, that, già, already, giù, below, più, more, può, may, can, quà, qui, here.

The following words are always written with the grave accent; caffè, coffee, così, so, thus, orsù, come, come on, oibò, fie.

OBSERVATIONS. — A final vowel bearing the grave accent has always a much quicker and sharper sound than when it is not thus designated.

ACUTE ACCENT. — This accent is used only on the letter i in the terminations ia, io, to indicate that the two vowels are pronounced in two distinct syllables, as: magía, magic; desío, desire.

These few cases are the only ones in which the accent is used in Italian. In this volume however the emphatic syllable of every Italian word of two or more syllables will be found accented. When the stress of the voice falls upon the vowels a, i, u, it is marked, except in the above cases, with the acute accent. E and O close are marked in the same manner; but when these letters are open, the circumflex accent is employed (ê, ô) to indicate at once the pause of the voice and the open sound of the vowel.

NOUNS. — GENDER. — NUMBER.

There are but two genders in Italian; all nouns, whether they relate to persons, things or abstract qualities, are either masculine or feminine.

Nouns ending in o are of the masculine gender, and form their plural in i: as, libro, libri, book, books, fanciúlo, fanciúlli, boy, boys.

Nouns ending in a are feminine, and form their plural in e; thus, dôнна, woman, dônne, women, câsa, house, câse, houses.

Nouns in e are some masculine others feminine, and all have their plural in i; as, pâdre, pâdri, father, fathers, mâdre, madri, mother, mothers.

Nouns ending in à or ù with the accent, as also those ending in ie, are feminine, and are the same in the singular as in the plural; as, città, city, città, cities; virtù, virtue, virtù, virtues; effigie, effigy, effigie, effigies.

Nouns ending in i are part masculine part feminine, and have no distinction of number, as, eclissi, eclipse, eclissi, eclipses.

Words ending in ca, ga have che, ghe in the plural; as, mônaca, mônache, nun, nuns, vérga, vérghe, rod, rods.

Dissyllables in co and go (except, pôrco, hog, Grêco, Greek), take chi, ghi in the plural; as, fuôco, fire, fuôchi, fires, luôgo, place, luôghi, places (pôrci, hogs).

Nouns in co, go of more than two syllables, if preceded by a consonant take h in the plural; as, seniscálco, seneschal, senescálchi, seneschals, albêrgo, hotel, albêrghi, hotels. — Preceded by a vowel they are mostly written without the h; as, amíco, friend, amíci, friends, teôlogo, a divine, teôlogi, divines.

Nouns ending in cio, gio, pronounced in one syllable form their plural by suppressing the o, or by changing io into j; as, bácio, kiss, báci, kisses, stúdio, study, studj (or studi), studies. — When io is accented and forms two distinct syllables, the o is in the plural changed into i: as, desío, desire, desíi, desires.

AUGMENTATIVES, DIMINUTIVES, etc.

A considerable number of Italian nouns, adjectives and verbs, admit certain post-fixes or changes of termination, which modify in a variety of ways the idea expressed by the primitive term. Thus one added to a word annexes to it the idea of largeness, etto, that of smallness, uzzo, uccio, pettiness, paltriness, accio, ugliness, odiousness, ino, ello, prettiness, slenderness, sightliness, otto, sturdiness, stoutness, vigour; ame, ume, quantity, number; eggiare, acchiare, erellare, repetition, continuity. OBSERVATION. — Previous to entering upon the study of the following pages, the student will do well to copy out and commit to memory at least one example of each of the above inflections. Acting thus he will have learnt before hand, and before he passes the threshold, the exact import of more than eight thousand Italian words.

VERBS.

Italian verbs are divided into three different conjugations, which are distinguished by the termination of the infinitive.

The first conjugation comprehends all those verbs which, in the infinitive, end in äre; as, amäre, to love; the second comprehends those which end in äre or ere; as temäre, to fear, crédere, to believe; and the third includes those ending in ire, as sentire, to feel.

The verbs of these three conjugations are varied or conjugated with the auxiliary verbs avère, to have, and éssere, to be.
